Damaskus var et af de vigtigste centre i den klassiske muslimske verden og hovedstad i det osmanniske Syrien.

Byen gennemgik i det 19. årh. i kølvandet på den industrielle revolution de samme forandringer som andre byer i middelhavsområdet.

Nye ideer, varer, arkitekturformer og ny teknik kom til at udfordre bestående mønstre i social og bymæssig organisation. Selvom Damaskus forandrede sig blev den aldrig en 'europæisk' by. I stedet blev privathuse, offentlige bygninger og bazarer moderniseret på en særlig 'Damaskus-måde', og der findes i dag over 1000 bygninger fredet af UNESCO i byen. Stefan Weber analyserer i dette pragtværks bind 1 arkitektur og byplanlægning i sammenhæng med samfundsudviklingen. Nye boligformer udviklede sig i takt med, at sociale omgangsformer blev forandret, og bogen belyser privatlivet som det formede sig for byboerne under et af de vigtigste vendepunkter i Mellemøstens historie. Bind 2 indeholder et omfattende katalog over alle kendte bygninger fra det 19. årh. med stribevis af hidtil upublicerede fotografier.
